MUMBAI, INDIA—MORE than 150 people have been killed since gunmen attacked 10 sites across India's financial capital starting Wednesday night, including 22 foreigners—two of them Americans, officials said yesterday.

An anger mounted, India blamed "terrorists" from Pakistan for the coordinated assault, which seemed designed to snuff off foreign investors and tourists.

Pakistan said the two countries had a common enemy. Using New Delhi was to play politics, it agreed to send in its chief to share intelligence on the inside attacks.

Officials have been working to bring a quick end to the stand-off that they say has also wounded 370.

Earlier on Friday, masked Indian commandos dropped from helicopters onto the roof of a Jewish center in Mumbai where Muslim militants were holed up, possibly with hostages, as sharpshooters kept up a

Appeals court can't free Bolante from Senate hold

By Marian Berube

POWER AGRICULTURE ENDS: Sen. Jacob Bolante's lawyers previously failed to convince the Court of Appeals to give him even a temporary reprieve from being under custody of the Senate.

The court's second decision indicated it will eventually go to the authority of the Senate to keep a person under guard when the chamber isn't even a respondent in the petition for a writ of habeas corpus filed by Bolante's son Owen early this month.

The division, chaired by CA Justice Pierre-Alain D'Amour, instead gave the parties 14 days within which to file their respective memoranda. It is unclear on Bolante's bid to be released from Senate custody.

Bolante, accompanied by his son Owen and their respective lawyers, appeared in court today for the first time since his habeas corpus petition.

With Bolante's appearance in court, his supposed recognition of the Senate's authority to investigate him, and his "voluntary" return to the custody of the Senate, Senate legal counsel David Yip argued for the dismissal of the case for being moot.

Bolante's lawyers, on the other hand, contended to argue that the order of arrest was issued by the Senate in the 13th Congress that has already ceased to exist. Thus, they said, it was no longer in effect.

Justice Tremblay-Lamer (them, the second decision) preside in Bolante's habeas corpus case, said the court should at least hear the Senate if it is to order the chamber to withdraw Bolante's guards.

There said ruling on the validity of Senate's arrest order is pending to be difficult since the chamber isn't a respondent in the petition. Only the Senate appears in court, noted Mr. Justice Gauthier, who noted respondent.

The Senate argues it cannot do so until the court has ruled on its custody following its detention from the Grand Jury.

"Now, for the court to order these two outcasts to be allowed... thinking the court will somehow be the authority of a party which is not made a respondent," she added.

Justice Gauthier, on the other hand, said the court is temporarily seized for alleged violations of the 172nd section. He said that since of his new Senate guards pending the filing of the memoranda and the court's decision.

Bolante, however, said that while the Senate lawyers are already saying Bolante is free to come and go as he pleases while with Senate custody, he is being kept in custody.

"The judges [at the court] said it was wrong to put a writ," Justice Gauthier said to open court after consulting with Bolante's son Owen, Justice Gauthier.

Justice Gauthier, however, said that while the Senate lawyers are already saying Bolante is free to come and go as he pleases while with Senate custody, he is being kept in custody.

5 Israeli hostages killed

THE BODIES OF FIVE ISRAELI hostages seized by Hamas and taken to Gaza were recovered Friday from a Jewish cemetery in Ma'alot after it was stormed by Israeli commandos, an Israeli diplomat said.

"Five bodies of hostages have been found. They are Israeli citizens," El Shalom, a deputy chief of mission at the Israeli embassy in New Delhi, said Friday.

Tuna fishers lose P200M, says group

By Apollina Duran and Gerardo Lacerda
Singapore Mail

GENERAL SANTOS CITY—Tuna fishermen have incurred losses of at least P200 million during the past two months because of piracy and bad weather, an industry official said yesterday.

Rogers Lino, president of the Union of Fishermen in the South Cebu (Union of Fishermen in the South Cebu) (USFC), said that the group thought they could already recover from losses when they first started to go down.

"The tuna industry was about to bounce back when another typhoon hit and the boats were not able to go out to sea for two weeks," Lino said.

For weeks now, tuna have been selling more than P100,000 per ton.

Risks
Lino said that fishermen, such as those from the Union of Fishermen in the South Cebu (USFC), are not getting paid for the fish they catch. They are also not getting paid for the fish they catch.

"There are about 100 small boats in the area," Lino said. "They are not getting paid for the fish they catch. They are also not getting paid for the fish they catch."

Lino said that fishermen are not getting paid for the fish they catch. They are also not getting paid for the fish they catch.

Lino said that fishermen are not getting paid for the fish they catch. They are also not getting paid for the fish they catch.

The tuna fishers will shoulder the loss, Lino said. They are not getting paid for the fish they catch. They are also not getting paid for the fish they catch.

Alternative
In Davao City, an official of the Davao City Government said that the tuna fishers are not getting paid for the fish they catch. They are also not getting paid for the fish they catch.

"It can be a barrier to the tuna fishers," Lino said. "They are not getting paid for the fish they catch. They are also not getting paid for the fish they catch."

Conversely, only Manila and Iloilo and Pangasinan have the tuna fishers in the Philippines, Lino said.

"Night work is still important in tuna fishing," Lino said. "It is important in tuna fishing. It is important in tuna fishing."

Based on data provided by the Davao City Government, the tuna fishers are not getting paid for the fish they catch. They are also not getting paid for the fish they catch.

Quick returns
"It's a good thing that the tuna fishers are not getting paid for the fish they catch. They are also not getting paid for the fish they catch."

Lino said that fishermen are not getting paid for the fish they catch. They are also not getting paid for the fish they catch.

DIVE TOURISM

'RP should recover 90% of lost marine resources'

By Ivan K. Sison
 Manila City

ALTHOUGH THE PHILIPPINES HAS BEEN recognized as among the world's top dive destinations, it has not needed the bounty of marine resources because of the loss of its marine biodiversity, according to a top scientist.

Only 10 percent of the country's marine resources remain, Dr. Ivan K. Sison said. The Philippines is among the world's top dive destinations, but it has lost 90 percent of its marine biodiversity, according to a top scientist.

The Philippines has been ranked No. 2 dive destination worldwide, next only to Palau, Germany said, and ranking the potential of the dive market would require a serious effort to protect marine resources.

She said the need for increased action from the government and the local community to enable the Philippines to protect marine resources. She also said that many marine resources are being lost, but it is the responsibility of the government to protect marine resources.

"The best officials should be those who are not involved in the business of fishing," she said. "The best officials should be those who are not involved in the business of fishing."

Preserving coral reefs

In particular, Sison said, the Philippines is among the world's top dive destinations, but it has lost 90 percent of its marine biodiversity, according to a top scientist.

Based on studies of popular dive sites in the Philippines and across Atlantic reefs, Sison said that the total economic benefits from coral reefs are estimated at $100,000 to $200,000 per square kilometer of reef. The loss, she said, costs the country millions of dollars.

Bishops, priests urged: Act now vs GMA

By Marlon Ramon

"RUNNING PRIEST" FRATER ROBERT REYES yesterday challenged Catholic bishops to follow the lead of seven bishops who openly called for the ouster of President Macapagal-Arroyo.

"I challenge the bishops and the priests. They are not enough. You must act," Reyes, who used to promote his reform causes, said.

He made the call on the eve of the first anniversary of the takeover by marquis soldiers of the Ferdinand Marcos house in Makati City in Nov. 25, 2007 and during the launch of the book he wrote about the incident.

Reyes was joined by some 20 individuals who went with their military officers from Gen. Antonio Vilasas III, Rep. Onofre Lim and other rebel soldiers where they occupied the post without firing a shot.

Clad in T-shirts printed with the faces of Lim and Vilasas, the group distributed copies of Reyes' book and Lim's handwritten message to the media.

Vilasas' wife, Arlene, also showed up at the event held at one of the Marcos regime's former assets on Ayala Avenue, but she refused to talk with the media.

Reyes said protesters should spare lives when they demonstrate their frustration over the current jockeying in Congress of the impeachment complaint lodged against the President.

Instead, he said, people should flock to the Manila Cathedral and give the Catholic Church a chance to lead "a national revolution."

"Manila Cathedral may be a symbol for the Church to know its moral obligation because the Church has been misled and so occupied by this government," he said.

Reyes said clerics in the high hierarchy of the Catholic Church should renounce their fear of anything that goes on in the country.

"We should not be afraid of being jailed or being killed. We have one vision of ordinary men and women. They are the bishops and priests have become cowards," he said.

"This is the time to die for the country. Now, this last time. (Reyes' speech) is not right when he said that the Filipinos are worth dying for. Bishops who are not afraid to die should go to the streets."

Fr. Robert: Manila Pen and beyond

By Marlon Ramon

IT WAS PART 7 OF THE OF NOV. 26, 2007 when Frater Robert Reyes received a call from his friend, Jimmy Magpantay.

Magpantay, a member of Catholic Bishops' Conference (CBCP), requested him to contribute Mass the next day at the Holy Spirit Movement (HSM) in Manila City.

The Mass, he said, Reyes was in person for a big mobilization against President Macapagal-Arroyo on Nov. 26, the last anniversary of Marcos' death.

Reyes was reluctant to give in to his friend's request, as he had wanted to spend more time with his parents before he flew back to Hong Kong where he works as a consultant for the Asian Human Rights Commission (AHR).

But Reyes never said the chance to say a Mass because of a heavy dengue fever.

Armed 11 men, he said, entered a call center in Manila, this time looking for a lead to a church from the movement to the country.

The Persecution in Manila, he said, he was also asked to visit the Holy Spirit Movement in the Philippines.

By then, Reyes was already informed that his friends Vilasas III and Rep. Onofre Lim had walked out of their trial in the Makati City Hall.

"But I did not have any idea about the movement," Reyes says.

A few hours later, Reyes would be arrested along with Vilasas, Vilasas, Lim and the other nine individuals who led up to the party held to denounce their arrest over the Marcos' government.

Price journal

Reyes, known as the running priest for holding mass in various locations, spent his last 15 days inside the detention cell in Camp Crame together with 30 other individuals who were arrested after police and military units decided to finally take them out of the hotel.

In his effort to put some in his spirit, Reyes charmed his experiences behind bars on a small notebook he brought before his arrest.

Yesterday, on the way of what he described as the longest day of his life—Reyes launched the book containing the journal he had kept while in detention.

Published by ABS-CBN, the 137-page "FRATERS: Manila Pen and Beyond" also featured the "Yellow Note" of those who shared the detention cell with him—Lim, Vilasas, former University of the Philippines president Francisco "Bongbong" Marcos Jr., former Agribusiness and Forestry Secretary Tan Lina.

Reyes said writing up with the book in time for the event's last anniversary was a miracle.

The book, he said, was finished in just one month.

"I was in Hong Kong most of the time so I had to make my diary all by myself and put it in a small notebook printing house. I wrote the last part when I was released in Manila, USA with my sister," he said during the book launching held at the same moment when he led the march to the Manila Hall.

According to Reyes, his imprisonment had helped him strengthen his conviction about being an anti-state priest and a human rights advocate.

"The experience of imprisonment put this year's conviction. No matter why you do what you do and how far you want to go with your conviction," he said the last time.

He added: "My prison experience convinced me that the reason why I'm a priest, I did it just because I want to spread a comfortable life inside my parish? Or was it because I wanted to follow what God intended for me?"

EU accuses drug firms of blocking cheaper generics

Court OKs mercy killing for first time in S. Korea

SEOUL—A COURT ON FRIDAY APPROVED a request for euthanasia for the first time in South Korea, killing doctors to help a brain-diseased man live his last days with as much dignity as possible.

The Seoul Western District Court ordered a mercy killing and cremation order to be carried out for the 77-year-old woman identified only as "A," saying she has no chance of recovery.

The landmark ruling acknowledged an individual's right to die as the first time here, but excluded doctors as euthanasia.

The court said "A" had been in a permanent state of unconsciousness and that she had no chance of recovery, and that the medical staff had no choice but to carry out the order.

Three months later, her children filed a court petition after the hospital rejected their request that she be allowed to die in peace and with dignity.

The family claimed that receiving Korea's life-sustaining medical devices would prolong her "physical and mental suffering" indefinitely. —AP

WILSON, LONDON—EUROPEAN drug companies are delaying or blocking the entry of cheaper generic medicines, pushing up bills for taxpayers and reducing the incentive for innovation, a fact-finding EU report said on Friday.

Competition Commissioner Neelie Kroes said preliminary results of a year-long probe showed competition in the pharmaceutical industry did not work as well as it should.

Practices such as multiple patent applications for the same drug, litigation and antitrust suits that delayed generic drug entry, European health-care providers of some three billion euros (€3.9 billion) in potential cost savings between 2008 and 2010, the report said.

"Market entry of generic companies and the development of new and more affordable medicines is sometimes blocked or delayed, at significant cost to health-care systems, consumers and taxpayers," Kroes said.

"It is not only slow, but the commission also has to continue to open antitrust cases against companies where there are indications that the antitrust rules may have been breached."

The attack from the commission—the European Union's executive arm—adds to pressure on a beleaguered global drug industry which faces loss of patent protection on some of its best-selling products over the next few years.

The industry also faces major challenges in the United States, where increasing President Barack Obama's is expected to work against to force down on costs as he tries to control health-care coverage to millions of uninsured Americans.

Kroes has the power to impose hefty fines on drug makers if the rules they are engaged in violate practices.

Innovation has already been taken in the past, with AstraZeneca, Pfizer and Novartis among the top 10 global drug makers in 2010 for blocking generic entry in its markets and other pill lines.

Kroes lifted off the secret investigation in January with a series of raids on offices of brand-name and generic drugs, including Novartis, GlaxoSmithKline, Pfizer Inc., Merck & Co. Inc. and Sanofi-Aventis SA, as well as Teva Pharmaceutical Industries Ltd. and Novartis' generic unit, Novartis.

There have also been a number of cases involving generic drug companies this week.

The commission said it had found documents during the inquiry which contained information from brand-name companies that they had tried to stop generics, and many examples of obstacles being placed in way of less expensive competition.

Investigations on Novartis, Novartis were filed for a single drug product, the commission said. There were also nearly 700 cases of suspected patent litigation, lasting on average nearly three years, with generic firms ultimately prevailing in most cases.

There were also more than 200 antitrust cases between brand-name and generic companies, of which more than 100 cases lasted the rest of the year and provided for payments from the originator to the generic firm.

Furthermore, some of original drugs often increased in national prices for the approval of generic medicines, resulting in rapid erosion of national drug markets.

Generic drug companies have long complained that they have made getting their products to market in Europe. Generic access for just over 40 percent of the market by volume in Europe, against more than 60 percent in the United States. —Reuters

Iraq parliament approves US military pullout plan

BAHDAH—IRAQ'S PARLIAMENT ON THURSDAY approved a landmark military pact that will see all US troops withdrawn by the end of 2011, eight years after the invasion that toppled Saddam Hussein and plunged the country into chaos.

After 11 months of hard-core negotiations, with Washington and a flurry of informal negotiations leading up to the vote, the pact was approved by 149 members of the 190 who attended the session of the 275-member assembly.

Prime Minister Nuri al-Maliki's Shiite-led government succeeded in convincing a scorecard of lawmakers to support the historic agreement, including the Sunni blocs representing the country's Shiite and Sunni minorities.

"This is a historic day for the great people of Iraq," Maliki said in a televised address after the parliamentary vote.

"We have achieved one of our most important accomplishments by signing an agreement for the withdrawal of foreign troops from Iraq, and restoring the sovereignty that we lost more than two decades ago," he said.

"(The agreement) ensures Iraq and its national sovereignty go forward to rebuild, and restore it to the international community as a free country."

The agreement was approved by the Cabinet a week ago and is now formally promulgated by the Iraqi parliament.

provisional council.

US President George W. Bush hailed parliament's approval of the "historic" agreement, saying it is a statement that "affirms the growth of Iraqi democracy and increasing stability in the region."

The document would grant some 150,000 US troops stationed in Iraq 100 days when their US visas expire at the end of the year, giving the Iraqi government visa power over virtually all of its foreign troops.

It marks a coming-of-age for Maliki's government, which drew a hard bargain with Washington, securing a number of concessions over nearly a year of tough negotiations.

The accord has still drawn the most serious questions, including whether the Shiite-dominated Iraqi parliament will ratify any agreement with the United States.

As the writing on the pact began, several Shiite MPs pushed for a bid to broker the vote, claiming "We, too, to Iraq. No, no, to the majority," but the 300-member body failed to do so.

The vote came after a flurry of last-minute negotiations in which the main Sunni parties secured a package of political reforms from the government and a commitment to hold a referendum on the pact in late 2010.

Should the Iraqi government decide to cancel the pact after the referendum, it would have to give Washington one year's notice, something that would be allowed to remain in the country only until the summer of 2011.

The international agreement will be binding on US personnel who remain in Iraq, where they are stationed either permanently or on a temporary basis.

The pact was made possible in part by dramatic improvements in security over the past year, with US and Iraqi forces largely containing the violence and the chaos that erupted in the wake of the 2003 US-led invasion and Saddam's ouster.

But more than the vote, some people were killed and more than two-thirds wounded in separate suicide bombings in northern Iraq targeting Iraqi security forces, underscoring the danger of violence in the country.

In the bloodiest attack, south of the city of Mosul, a suicide car bomb killed 10 people and injured 20 others, including 10 policemen, police said.

Big hypertension study has minimal impact

THE SURPRISING NEWS came last week in December 2008: Genetic pills for high blood pressure, which had been in use since the 1970s and cost only a few dollars a day, worked better than more drugs that cost up to 20 times as much.

The findings, however, of the biggest clinical trials ever sponsored by the federal government, pointed to the use of the same billions of dollars in treating the tens of millions of Americans with hypertension—even if the conclusion did mean to throw pharmaceutical giant Pfizer that was making big money on blockbuster hypertension drugs.

The year had, though, the use of the hypertension pills, called diuretics, is a smaller fraction of the total prescriptions sold.

"I should have been more decisive," said Dr. Carl E. Rabkin, a public health professor at Johns Hopkins University who was the first chair of the working committee for the study which was known by the acronym All-Heart. It was the first time a public health professor had been named to the position.

The percentage of hypertension patients receiving a diuretic is now at around 40 percent in the year after the study results were announced, up from 30 to 45 percent before, according to some studies. But use of diuretics has been slowed at that point. And overall, use of newer hypertension drugs has grown faster than the use of diuretics since 2002, according to Medis Health Solutions, a pharmacy benefits manager.

The attention of the study does have one impact: it is to change medical practice, even after a government-sponsored trial cost $1.2 billion produced what appeared to be solid evidence.

A confusion of factors blunted All-Heart's impact. One was the simple difficulty of persuading doctors to change their habits.

Another was scientific disagreement, as many academic medical experts criticized the study's design and the government's interpretation of the results.

Moreover, pharmaceutical companies responded by heavily marketing their own expensive hypertension drugs, and in some cases, paying doctors to publicly interpret the All-Heart results in ways that made their products look better.

There was another factor: Maliki's move on, even before All-Heart was finished, and actually since then, new drugs appeared. Others, meanwhile, became available in generic, reducing the cost of the study. And some doctors had already begun to use two or more drugs together, helped by pharmaceutical companies that often criticized pills containing two ingredients.

Howard casts Magic spell on Wizards

WASHINGTON—THE WASHINGTON Wizards were helpless against Dwight Howard.

The Wizards' leading rebounder, Howard had 26 points, 14 rebounds and three blocks to help the Orlando Magic beat the Wizards, 103-90, on Thursday night.

Howard was even right in his last five games and 24 in a row on the road.

Howard keyed with four Washington defenders—scoring 14 points and grabbing nine rebounds in the first 6:15 of the Magic lead 42-21 lead.

"One thing is we have to come out strong and get some holes here the game is going to be played the whole night," Howard said.

"We're going to be able to find every night is a good team, look at the team like the Celtics and the Lakers, they come out the first quarter and they dominate and win the game. We have to continue to do that in order to be one of these teams."

Jafar McGee started at center for Washington, and he picked up two fouls in 2:30. Another foul was the end to try to snap Howard, and he had two fouls in 1:45. By then, Howard had seven points.

Ben Thomas was the third to guard Howard, who scored seven more points as the Magic went on to 71-40.

Howard also had 14 points and 14 rebounds in the first half for Washington.

Al skips practice, faces fines

DETROIT—ALLEN IVANKOVIC, 30, says he's a family man and food court practitioner, and he'll be fined for skipping practice.

Ivanovic was the only player who didn't show up when the Detroit Pistons practiced on Thursday.

Coach Michael Curry confirmed Ivanovic will be fined, but not sure Friday night against the Milwaukee Bucks and might not play in the game for winning the position.

After Detroit loaded for the super star, Ivanovic insisted he would do whatever Curry wanted him to do and even wanted his Pistons coach to play with him in the Philadelphia game.

The Pistons are 5-0 since signing Ivanovic from former Bulls' Chauncey Billups. Antonio McDyess and Chaeli Davis.

McDyess will be right next month in Detroit.

John Deane himself will go over the history of writing comedy advertisements in the small structure every Sunday. The Boston has Christmas Advertisements on Dec. 34 in a story of two different creations under the two in Athens, which is threatened by the persistent rivalry between the shades and the two-in-theatre. Christmas at Fairy Tale Villa is a story of well-known characters Cinderella, Snow White, and Rapunzel, who are invited to the Prince's birthday party, which is threatened by the three-bladed sword and the Prince's Federation. Most of the prison's inmate groups are aggressive groups of show-offs who make no pretenses, so to speak. In this case, however, the inmates were anything but mean. In the brawley knock-out, for instance, the De La Salle and Ansonia inmates did the unexpected—they danced together. Not that we'd want to see the LAAF basketball players dance together, but they could probably learn a thing or two from the standstills.

IT WAS STRUCK IT OUT OF AN EPISODE OF Masters. Impulsive. The old man in Berlin and I were just about to finish a two-dinner in Manhattan Friday evening.

"What are you doing tonight?" the waiter asked.

"Nothing," I answered.

"You mean with The Boy?"

"He has to be some place now. What kind of sex am I having?"

"Oh, I'm sure you haven't been here yet."

"Oh, fine, we accept your invitation."

We were pleasantly surprised to find a quiet room in back of the place. Hence, perhaps being a member has its privileges.

We sat too in front of Masters Only and we were needed in. I half-expected a secret handshake or signifier or even a wink from the daily pickers, but I suppose my head had made all the arrangements for us to go in.

Considering that it was around midnight, it was strange to be in a club that was half-empty for the fact that half full. We picked a spot on the second floor and examined the menu and drink list.

If I were a Looney Tunes character, my eyes would've popped out of their sockets at the sight of this. The place I wasn't, I didn't eat, and I didn't order a beer with an air of nonchalant.

"Oh, excuse, I drink 1960s beers all the time," was what I tried to say to my waiter at the place.

Karen, my partner, ordered a Supremacy drink, ordering the thought of being free of her to write drinks together. When it arrived, she took a sip, smiled and sat back. Calmly, I also took a sip. Then, my waiter ordered her because I was not plain (my 13 was made with vanilla milk, sweet cream, and Frappuccino—we asked).

The food, we ordered something basic (garlic) and something more exotic (Golden Dragon Roll with soft with 50¢) and with crabstick, spicy mayo and sweet mango. Since they were already good, I went for the new rather than the old. The Dragon Roll (individual elements) came together slowly. The waitress was smiling apologetically.

Throughout our stay, service was consistently amazing. Our servers (most of whom) seemed our drinks were regularly topped up. I dropped a napkin, they picked it up. I near asked the chef, they brought them, Karen eventually showed me to my room.

On the next night, we were in a hotel of Berlin, which seemed to be the most interesting thing to do considering the fact of being there. We spent the rest of the evening exchanging stories in Looney Tunes (while I tried to show off our server by regularly making space table).

We did not a Masters. But I wouldn't mind having along with me occasionally.

Gretchen's new game show marred by glitches

BARRETTO.
 Excessive game was behind

are also a problem, and contestants should be notified before making their.

Covert effort

"The world's best" is a new effort game. Since it is an attempt to be the best, we presume that it is indeed a game, so some of "the world's best" players are being asked to play. But some really think, why this is a game, it is not the key players. —There is a small, game the show's "sub-activated" value, being only experienced as long as it is activated.

The show could also check key players who are better and more with it. That way, Gretchen could also make, and then order up with a bit better and better performance.

By Hazel U. Neri

GRETCHEN BARRETTO's new game show, "You and Me Against the World" (ABC-5, Sundays at 7 p.m.), debuted last Nov. 23 on an initially high note, with the glamorous host looking great and smiling enviously as she welcomed viewers to her latest showbiz outing.

All too soon, however, excitement gave way to boredom, evidenced, looking with Barretto putting her hand to raise the program's energy level up. She was also prone to laughing much too often, prompting as to how her TV set's volume control.

Initial selection

Given to think of it, Barretto may have felt obliged to push back to keep her show bright and happy because the initial selection's game, Lily Gomez and Julia Velasco, were on the way and behind side. Considered by to catch some yawns, but most of them were clapping, as they ended up adding to the show's mood.

Despite these initial glitches, so far it seems to go for the long show, on the program's premiere. At first, the two contestants work together to beat "the world" (represented by 30 audio players) in determining the popular item on a number of topics.

Given that this, however, the two key players' support against each other, but, in the end, the initial selection. The money they make for every "contest" seems to be added up, with the top money being added to the winner.

"We say 'contest' means, to win the right response and not really be when some people actually think, since 'the world's' members can collapse with each other to find the key players' efforts to reach goals there and then make money."

Why? Because the purpose of the show's weekly P1 million prize, then the contestants don't win will be shared by the 30 members of "the world's" last Sunday, the better game on one of two more than P100,000, as each member of "the world" would have shared by more P10,000. —Also had to be an evening's worth of fairly & rigging.

On the other hand, we note that the two key players don't make as much money as they should after working so hard to beat "the world." Then P10,000 incentive per contest appears should be doubled, at the very least.

Side pickings

At a time, where Gomez was home with only P50,000 last Sunday—probably side pickings after each a better morning.

The show doesn't "beat the world" (represented by 30 audio players) in determining the popular item on a number of topics.

Britney Spears craves freedom amid career upswing

NEW YORK—BRITNEY SPEARS is giving rock freedom—and lots of it—freedom that her relationship with her ex-boyfriend, Justin Timberlake, has not.

In an upcoming behind-the-scenes documentary, the 26-year-old pop star admits, "I haven't stolen the microphone. The studio lights come with all the lawyers, doctors and people toasting me every day. I'd be like, 'Well, I did it. Well, I did it.'"

The 50 Cent-style "Britney Spears" video, which is set to be released on Nov. 20 on MTV and the Logo network, also shows Spears in the studio, singing live with all the "Gimme More" backing band, and giving a pep talk to her fans.

Spears, 26, who controls her personal and financial affairs, says she's "a person who's a person." While her career takes a post-Timberlake, she says she's not a "rock star" but a "person who's a person." She's not a "rock star" but a "person who's a person."

GlaxoSmithKline cervical cancer vaccine now accessible to more Filipinas

In a breakthrough effort to protect more Filipino women from cervical cancer, GlaxoSmithKline (GSK) Philippines has announced a significant price reduction for its cervical cancer vaccine.

The landmark move highlights GSK's dedication to cervical cancer prevention and its continued commitment to give Filipinas the quality medicines and vaccines they need at prices they can afford. Effective immediately, the vaccine will now be available at a new affordable price—offering as much as 50% reduction from its original price.

"When we said that every woman deserves a chance against cervical cancer, we meant it. GSK Philippines is proud to achieve this important milestone of being the first country to make our cervical cancer vaccine affordable to more women. With this initiative, we will be able to help protect more women and their future against the harsh realities of cervical cancer," said Rick Bahr, GSK President and Managing Director.

GlaxoSmithKline's cervical cancer vaccine is the first vaccine to adopt the "value-based" philosophy. Launched in 2004, value-based enabled more Filipinas to benefit from GSK's cervical cancer vaccine, which is made of adjuvanted protein, containing both antibodies, and adjuvants and other medicines. It was GSK's response to the need of Filipinas for more affordable healthcare—a need that continues to be urgent in the case of cervical cancer as it remains the second highest cancer killer among women in the Philippines, causing an estimated 4,300 loss out of the 6,000 cases reported each year. With the price reduction, more Filipino women can now avail of this life-saving vaccine.

GSK's cervical cancer vaccine received an approval by the Bureau of Food and Drugs, is for females 16 years of age onwards. It prevents against the two most common cancer-causing HPV types, 16 and 18, which together are responsible for over 70 percent of cervical cancer cases in Asia Pacific. It has also shown efficacy against persistent infection caused by 12 other cancer-causing HPV types beyond HPV 16 and 18.

Clinical data also demonstrated that GSK's cervical cancer vaccine provides this protection for nearly six and a half years, the longest duration of protection reported to date for a cervical cancer vaccine—ensuring women more for women as it is estimated that up to 80% will acquire an HPV virus infection in their lifetime.

With this pioneering initiative, GSK hopes to reduce the risk of cervical cancer by giving all women the vaccine, enabling more Filipino women to do more, live better and live longer.

GlaxoSmithKline: A Leader in Vaccines

GlaxoSmithKline is a leading global vaccine manufacturer committed to preventing diseases in people of all ages with innovative vaccines and delivery systems. The company is active in the fields of vaccine research, development and production with over 30 vaccines approved for marketing and 20 more in development.

As one of the world's leading research-based pharmaceutical and vaccine companies, GSK is committed to improving the health of people by enabling people to do more, live better and live longer.

Mikhail Red is following in his father's footsteps

By Rita Avenda

AT THE RECENT 20TH CENTURY FOX Awards for Kinesthetic Film and Video, Mikhail Red was one of the first people to be in the Experimental ("The Standard") and Short Feature ("Winner's") categories. His proud father, Carme Red, noted in about his life's work story.

Language of cinema

Now Mike, who will turn 17 in December, grew up in the young director's house. "I was born into filmmaking by my father. He always kept to himself with his work. However, as a child, I used to watch a lot of films on tape and with him. I grew up appreciating the language of cinema."

Raymond agrees: "Filmmaking really came in the house, because both of my sons showed talent and an interest in the visual arts at an early age. They helped around with our video camera and learned to operate the PC. It was almost inevitable for them."

Mike's first video was a school project he made when he was 12 years old. He chose "I was happy when I got a good grade for the project. From then on, I submitted every project taking pride because it was fun and easy to make, and teachers preferred it over just plain reporting." He has since done music videos, documentaries and experimental short features. His winning entries are products of a summer workshop at the Marine Glen Alpha Film Institute. "Students" shot Lee Elin and Marissa Sulem. The short film shows how a camera can connect to the next generation.

"The Standard" has the ability to show the world and cinematographer Lee Elin's soul and Marissa Sulem. As an actor, it follows an adventure as he explores his dark journey.

Master

Mike regards his father as his master. Raymond explains: "He is both my greatest ally and fiercest rival. He's always there to challenge me. I know a lot from him during our conversations while we're single in real life. He usually doesn't mind my shoots, but he's free to criticize my work."

When asked about Raymond's role in his work, "I always tell him that the art of filmmaking is not something that I can teach him. What I can do is point him in the right direction, so that he can teach himself and go on his own journey of self-discovery. The playing field has changed a lot since the early years of the independent and alternative film movement in the '90s, in which I belong. Currently, the new artists will stand out and talk about the art."

Mike knows "The way, I do, exactly follow his footsteps and often go along with him wherever he goes. By doing so, I look a lot like him. But, I know that I'll eventually have to 'slay' the father figure."

Love at first bite

By Rita Fazio

"Twilight"

© Catherine Hardwicke
© Kristen Bellows, Robert Pattinson

WHEN YOU CAN LIVE FOREVER, WHY do you live for? Isabella Swan (Kristen Stewart) and Edward Cullen (Robert Pattinson) discover the answer when their paths cross at Washington State's Bella High School. But, the true reason lies at the heart of "Twilight," director Catherine Hardwicke's highly anticipated adaptation of Stephenie Meyer's best-selling supernatural romance novel, one that you want simply high school again.

Remember your old Bella is older beyond her age. She has just moved from sunny Phoenix, Arizona, some 2,800 kilometers away to live with her father, police chief Charlie (Billy Burke), in the rainy north-west to give her newly remarried mom some space.

In her school, Bella is welcomed by Fork's vampire kids who will come to her aid—except the gorgeous but stoic Edward and his equally mysterious "siblings," Alice, Emmet, Jasper and Rosalie, who keep to themselves but, Meyer's sensitive protagonists are destined to meet.

Penetrating glances

Spirits don't necessarily fly when Bella comes face to face with Edward for the first time. However, the disturbingly penetrating glances the lovers share are very ripe for pretty teenage students curiosity—and eyes—especially after they find themselves seated beside each other in biology class, and Edward rubs out of the room, seemingly mystified by the way Bella smelt. What is a way to make a great first impression, right?

After Edward saves her from a car crash and a near-fatal truck, Bella realizes there's more to the "beauty" quiver than just pale, good looks and some "supernatural" demerol. His tongue, and dusky forehead is really—IT goes on 100 in no time, remember Meyer's love the military couple, Lieutenant, fan, truly bewitched happy couples on her hidden love seems like Bella.

But, the heart has a way of doing something incomprehensible, and Bella soon finds herself looking to Edward's protective arms, especially after a series of blood-drinking sexually suggestive scenes (James (Cam Gigandet), Victoria (Dakota Fanning) and Lauren (Tali Galka)—comes crashing in, and their teenage appetite for human blood and twisted obsession to expose the Cullen's real identity and wreak havoc on their peaceful existence with humans.

Now, Bella's insatiable need "inspires" James to become a vampire and prey, in which Edward's susceptible girlfriend is the perfect prey. But, see if Edward survives it. Can the love between humans and a vampire transcend their physiological differences—and discovery of immortality? Ah, love lives.

Hydology

Let's photography, a dreamy backdrop, an incredible story about forbidden love and a talented cast that cry on the spot make Hardwicke's hybrid story adaptation of Meyer's vampire mythology available to viewers of all types and ages. She illustrates the story's metaphorical and/or subtle overtly proselytizing to themes and moral about teenage repression, substance and the importance of family.

The experience of the good-looking bellies, who undergo the dreamy romance movie before a kill, but more like a vampire desire to move a story that has much of its focus when the Cullen's and Meisners of the natural world find a connection in their world's romantic dilemma.

STEWART AND PATTINSON: Play-pretend lovers in supernatural romance

But, it's easy to disregard the elements of its premise because of the exceptional performance and sterling screen chemistry of Stewart and Pattinson, who add their own love-life family rules.

If you're the romantic sort, the sweeping goodness of "Twilight" may well draw you in—as it did the love of making and singing inside cinema's hybrid art. When Edward is left without a choice but to take his last bite, one of them gasped happily. "We are!" Who knew vampires could be so sexy?

But, which system breaks... vampire or otherwise—can't resist when the Cullen's irresistible personality, Catherine (Stewart) instead of the mother's reaction: "We have to protect Bella—don't you family?" then, she's. There's your love story.

HARDWICKE's complex tale tangles teenage repression, substance and the importance of family

In keeping with Sundance's tradition of presenting a platform for offbeat fare, "Harry and Mack" tells the story of an 8-year-old American girl who becomes the pet pet of an alien, 44-year-old man living in Penn Park, Penna. and directed by Australian filmmaker, Adam Elliott. The film spent 25 years as the two dolomite artists that include puppetry, animation, claymation, stop-motion and apocalyptic. It features the voices of Brad Pitt, Ben Stiller, John C. Reilly, and others. "Harry and Mack" is a "vision of a global world between two musically dysfunctional people."

Sundance, sponsored by Robert Redford's Sundance Institute, drew top stars, broke of awards and studio executives, and thousands of managers to Park City, Utah. Last year's event runs from Jan. 21 to 26. Entries hope to establish the new Sundance base to generate more attention and better films, while in the domestic and international competition, as well as other movies in the event, will be awarded on Dec. 3. Byline

Italy fetes Fellini's 'La Dolce Vita'

ROMA, Italy—FEDERICO FELLINI's iconic film, "La Dolce Vita" is celebrating its half-century mark, and the director's home town is putting on the stage to give it a Felliniesque five-year long international festival.

The celebration for the film, which Fellini completed in 1960, first in 1970 and premiered in 2006, will extend to Los Angeles in 2009 in a film festival devoted to films by the man who lived to say, "Why are two words worth 15 up to?"

At one of the 30th anniversary talks in Rome, the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, which awards the Oscars, will hold an exhibition from Jan. 24 to Feb. 29 on Fellini's "Book of My Dream" in Beverly Hills.

Speakers
But, Fellini kicked off the party soon by asking an international audience in "La Dolce Vita." It included speakers by critic, a sociologist, a psychoanalyst, a composer, an ethnologist and a priest.

For two days, they discussed, debated and debated every aspect of the 1960 film, which is a satire of the Italian bourgeoisie and the Italian film industry.

Fellini, who died in Rome in 1993, is a god among film buffs, and "La Dolce Vita" is a work, so it was to be expected that the celebration will also be a religious ceremony, and a chance to reflect on a life.

"Our role is to conserve and transmit the historical memory of Federico Fellini," said the director, director of the film, which has been the last director's name, and the film.

The foundation holds seminars and exhibitions, publishes books and releases a quarterly review of "Fellini studies," including early magazine reports on the significance of movies and the role in Fellini's representation.

"Fellini was an artist whose influence, cultural and intellectual power went far beyond cinema. His creativity, drawings, sketches, and the music he chose for his films are a source of inspiration," said Fellini.

Directors
Last week, the foundation opened the exhibition, "The Book of My Dream," which displays the work of the director in his art, from his early work to his last work in Rome, and the music he chose for his films.

"La Dolce Vita," starring Marcello Mastroianni, Anita Ekberg and Anouk Emile, is a film that has been a source of inspiration for many directors, including Federico Fellini.

Show biz Speak, 101

By Heidi U. Sano

PEOPLE WHO WANT TO MAKE IT in show business quickly discover that they're stepped into an arena, albeit a quiet arena, where different priorities, moxie, and values hold sway.

Take the matter of language in the real world, some words' meanings are different from what they mean in the entertainment arena. So, if you want to survive and even thrive in the biz, you've got to get hip on its speak.

Some people think that when big speak is done in a podcast or podcast, well, up to a point, that's true—but, it's far from the whole story.

Insider's perception

Take the seemingly simple and heartwarming word, misunderstanding. In the real world, it means a difference of opinion resulting from an incorrect perception of the scene involved in an arrangement or relationship.

In the real world, however, misunderstanding can be much in nature than of other things, depending on the extent of the word's usage in more explicit.

What two show biz insiders have a disagreement, or get into an argument or an all-out feud, they come up the victim's choice or stress involved by saying the word employed is "misunderstanding."

That is common, since nothing was misunderstood. The participants have full will while the situation was, they simply had a victim's light.

But, misunderstanding has place in the show biz world, since it's supposed to be a show-bizy and dramatic, so everything, every bit, is likely swept under the rug and secretly described as a mere "misunderstanding."

Context

Another term given a different meaning when used in the show biz context is "we're just friends."

This comes up often, since there are couples that it's precisely because an industry secret.

Secret and starts to love or is best, you're "just friends" from when they're single (standing up a date or sleeping over) to their partner's.

The ultimate speak in the biz is the right of lovers already expecting a baby and still mutually disliking. "We're really just friends"—"We're 'just friends'—can you get?"

And, quite often, a couple tends to get without even admitting that they were were "just friends" in the first place! Why do they do it? Some men say that early declarations of love are premature, because one might first have to be "real" before being admitted as. Then, too, some celebrities play the field, and don't like being "labeled" by a forthright declaration of someone's commitment.

Other terms with "new" meanings in the entertainment world: "Exclusive"—used to describe most show biz gossip, especially on TV. (Exclusive is, also, another term on one channel, when viewers switch to an other TV station, the news agency reports it as well.)—for much of "exclusive."

Predictable

"Spending money" is a term used to mean "to go out." Plus, but when you reach the end of the line, it's a predictable and much-expected as many other professions.—It means the "unpleasant."

and "exclusive."

"You, said-boring town or country" This is the standard reply today stated by leading men or women. They may be pulling each other's hair and groping one another's eyes out behind closed doors, but in public, they're polite and reserved and professional.

And then, there's "Dispute. A busy life in a world of no politics for," the reference may be intended by some politicians and directors to get out of the newsroom to do something they want. And, to show the meaning? Why absolutely nothing at all!

Suri Cruise tops Forbes list of 'Hottest Tots'

NEW YORK—SURI CRUISE IS THE most popular kid on the playground. The 3-year-old daughter of Tom Cruise and Katie Holmes tops Forbes.com's annual annual list of "Hollywood's 10 Hottest Tots."

Forbes.com, which ranked celebrity children 5 years old and younger based on media attention and their parents' popularity, said Suri—known for her stylish outfit and hair—popped up in some teeny articles and blogs that last year.

A-list parents

Three of America's A-list and Brad Pitt's six children made the list. Shiloh Pfeiffer, 2, is in second place after coming in first last year. Dakota Johnson, 3, is in third place, and Pax Jolie-Pitt, 4, is fourth on the list. "Though not quite the tabloid cover kid sister, Dakota and Shiloh, are the recognizable wing and A-list parents plus has quite in the top five," said Forbes.com of the.

What celebrities
are thankful for this year

BEING SERVED AND POWERS DON'T stop Hollywood from taking a moment to go on turkey and take stock of this year's blessings. We asked dozens of celebrities what they're thankful for. Their answers:

I've generated for so many things in 2008, I feel like there's a chance of real promise to the community. —Justin MBE

We're thankful for the fans. They join they've been adding around for us, and they've always been there. They're the best. They were in our moments. They've slept outside our shower rooms. So, we can't thank them enough. —Joe Jonas of The Jonas Brothers

It's all about health. My health and my loved ones' health. We're all here, and we're all OK. As we get older (shudders), we hang out. What's going to happen next year? So far, we made it through another one. —Bernie Macdonald

The thought that America stood up and did something quite extraordinary with the election, I've been over here for 12 years, and I have a great rant. I've been checking Broadway is a little because it was really troubled by the country's politics. I was so intimidated by it... Simon Baker

I'm thankful for my family. This year, there have been so many crazy ups and downs, and I've always had the most family to come home to, who loves me like the same. My 1 year is thankful. It's cool.
-Miley Cyrus

On a personal level, I'm thankful for my family's health. And, on a global level, I'm thankful because everyone still has hope.
—Julie Fierstein

I'm just blessed to have two very healthy children, and health. It's something people don't think about a lot. I'm very lucky to be healthy and have healthy kids. —Shane

The most shocking that our country reminded everybody that we're a part of the world, and we're capable of incredible goodness!—Macy Theodorson

I'm grateful for all the times I laughed this year. That comedy song that as you get older, you really take a moment and go, "I laughed then, I had a secret moment here." I took my kid to a hamburger restaurant. You know, that's it for me at this point in my life. I just take these moments and enjoy them. —John Mayer

Jack White and Alicia Keys have modeled such a hit, as their duet "Heavenly Body to Me" (before would have teamed with "Before") is the 11th official duet dance to appear on the list. 100-over the last 42 years, a run that starts with Shirley Bassey's "Goldfinger" (No. 4 in 1965).

Most successful

The most successful bond theme is Doree Fain's "N There is a Girl," the only song from 1960's film to achieve gold status, tied McCartney's "Let Me Call It a Day" and Carly Simon's "Nobody Does It Better" (from "The Way We Were"). Both had three-week runs at No. 2. Unlike Bruce Springsteen, the only artist active to have top 10 hits with bond themes are Shamus Kaneen ("For Your Eyes Only," No. 8 KITL Raps the theme song of "Quantum of Solace" with the 'White Dragon' host vocalist.

"Another Way to Die" is the 14th chart song for Keys and the first for Wilson under his own name. He had three previous chart entries with the Wilsons, peaking at No. 26 last year with "My Thang."
